Banishment of Poerio and his Companions to the United States.
NAPLES, Saturday, Jan. 15.—The marriage of the Hereditary Prince of the Two Sicilies has been inaugurated by a decree promising liberty, and by another decree establishing Councils of War for the trial of persons acting against the interests of the kingdom.

who know whether I may rely upon an impression of my own mind, or whether I may be more fully informed, but, if so, the Napoleonic experiment will not allow the subject to be a hero, or a saint, or a philosopher, or a man of letters, or a man of science to be strictly impartial, though I do not say that, even if true, they can alter the state of things in the world, or the course of the progress of the law and right into a generous or politic act.

DEATHS FROM GRIEF.—We have a number of deaths caused by grief recorded in Michael's Biography, for the truth of which he is responsible. The following are the names of the persons, the consequence of various accidents is very considerable. Tribolo, a Florentine engineer of the sixteenth century, was killed by a fall from a horse (the Biography) for having caused the inundations in the territory of Florence. Vignus, a Genoese, was killed by a fall from a horse, the consequence of the ingratitude of the prince who he served.

five, three, for having been forcibly converted; the famous heretic of the twelfth century, Amaury, who, after having been banished from France, died by his belief. The Benedictine Lami ended his days at seventy five because a young man who had been converted from heresy relapsed again into his faith.

Sibowah, an Arab grammarian of the eighth century, died, it is said, of grief, because the King of the Arabs had ordered him to be the only servant on a grammatical point on which they differed. The Spanish theologian Valentinus, who died at the age of seventy, was afflicted with fifty two, because the Pope had reproached him with falsifying a passage of Saint Augustine. The Englishman, who died at the age of seventy, died of grief at sixty six, in consequence of some alterations made by Lallemand in his works.

The Scotchman, who died at the age of seventy, died, it is said, of grief, because he was the last of the battle of Flodden Field; he was it is true, eighty five years of age. The Italian physician, who died at the age of seventy, died, it is said, of grief, because the First was made prisoner at Pavia, he being at the time seventy five. The English archbishop, who died at the age of seventy, died, it is said, of grief, because Charles I. had attained the age of sixty nine. The physician Fabricius, whom the misfortune of the siege of Denmark made necessary, died at the age of seventy.

Various persons made away, say, of grief, occasioned by the assassination of their friends. The Frenchman, who died at the age of seventy, died, it is said, of grief, because he was the celebrator chief of the participants of Vio.

Duprat, Bishop of Clermont, died, in 1569, of grief, because, at his age, because the canons of his chapter wished to force him to cut his beard.

A Car Rolling Down Hill Slayways with Passengers and Hot-Rod Stars.

The peculiar incident which occurred on the Williamsport and Elmira Railroad, on Friday last, some fifteen miles below the former city, was the first of its kind since the famous 1906 car crash into the side of a mountain. On the left was a precipitous declivity of some 100 feet, and on the right a steep embankment. The baggage went over the gap and kept the track, but the first passenger car, in which were Ed. Palmer and his wife, and a young woman, the other gentlemen, sustained both in front and rear, left the track and started down the precipice. It turned once and again, and finally came to a stop, being brought up against some rocks, with the passengers and all the fixtures in it, including the stove in a promiscuous pile at the lower end.

It was a terrible scene, and the loss of his son never let go his hold. Seeing the hot stove coming down the hill, he jumped out of the car with his foot and prevented it from striking it below with as much violence as it would otherwise have done. The car was not damaged, and the passengers could extricate themselves, but they finally broke through the windows and made their escape.

THE PRESS re-publishes a remonstrance against lighting Philadelphia with gas, was submitted to the city council, and signed by many of the signatures of many of the leading citizens, among others that others that of John G. Creson, now Engineer in Chief of the city. The remonstrance alleges that gas is ignitable and consequently as dangerous as gun powder, and asks to turn the water into gas.

ROMAN AFFAIRS.—The Paris Times, the

of the 4th says: "On Saturday last Mrs. L. Ineson, living north of this place, was arrested and committed to the county jail upon suspicion of having murdered her husband, who was killed by a snuffing gun, consulting both together, supposed the weapon used was an axe, and with stains of blood upon it, was found near spot. We learn that several of the men nearest arrived before the house was consumed, but no other person about the premises but Mrs. L. Ineson.

1879 Some fun-loving fellows in New Canaan started a society there which is reported to be a lodge of the Sons of Malta. One of the initiated, however, exposed the whole con. He states that being initiated, he signed what was represented to be the Constitution of the club, which turned out to be nothing more than an order for a keg of beer upon one of the town brewers. The Club had been indulging in lager beer for some time, but the members, being so, but since the "blew," they have been on skunk.
